

Tuesday, February 6th, 2007

Well, for our first blog we have a lot to throw at you. The script is done. The casting has been a grueling process (with all of the funky character traits) but it is also nearly done. We've had to hold off on filming for some time now because of the cold weather. Since 95% of the movie is made up of outdoor scenery and certain conditions, we're trying to keep as much of it the same as possible. Well that's it for now. Hopefully we'll have more to update you on soon. -Jeff

Monday, February 26, 2007

Hello again walpole website goers,

We managed to get some amazing footage over vacation. We got a lot done and the hard work is definitely starting to pay off. More updates very soon.

-Jeff

Tuesday, March 6, 2007

When I read Walker's script I wasn't sure what to make of it. After all, what can you say about a script that involves hillbillies, cross-dressers, and expert Russian ping-pong players. The script was one of the Creative Writing classes' favorites last semester. Jeff and Nick have been extremely busy with the school musical, so most of the filming has been done over break. So far, it looks hysterical (in the same vein as Right and Wong). Walker and crew still need to shoot the major scenes, most of which will be outside. Hopefully, they get it done because I love the footage that they have.

Tuesday, May 22, 2007

First off let me tell you how much Bob Bunker has impacted my life to the fullest extent. Secondly... and more importantly, this year and the past years in film festival have been some of the most stressful but mostly fun years of my life. The movie was so much fun to make and even though it didn't win any awards the audiences reaction was enough reward for us. Words really can't describe when you're sitting there in the theatre watching your very own creation on the screen while others are watching it for the first time. So now I'm moving on to the big world and we thank everyone who came to see and who supported the move and the film festival. A special thank you to Mr. Alan and everyone else who helped us along the way. Make movies or make excuses.

-Jeff Walker and the cast and crew of "Oh, Brother"

Wednesday, January 16, 2008

I, Jeff Walker, am shipping out to Fort Benning in Georgia as of 1/31/08. Mr Alan says... "Write a blog". Though I'm not exactly sure what to say, I can say that the film festival changed a lot of my outlook on life. What I've learned from movies is that almost anything can be done, regardless or not it looks like it can be done. If it can be thought up, it can be done. Which is a lot similar to the attitude that we take in the army. So my advice to all of you is to embrace the festival and take all you can out of it. Put all your work and wit into it and take it for all that it's worth. This is Walker shipping out.

-Jeff Walker (Locker)